

CIA had Morrissey, Virgil

Virgil Morrissey;
Editor at CIA

Virgil J. Morrissey, 56, a proofreader and editor for the Central Intelligence Agency, died Thursday of a heart attack while on a trip to Dade City, Fla.

Mr. Morrissey, who lived at 2820 Sixty-fourth avenue, Cheverly, Md., had been employed at the CIA for 15 years. He was previously engaged in editing work at Fort McNair.

Born in Oil City, Pa., he came to the District 19 years ago. Mr. Morrissey was a member of St. Andrew's Catholic Church in Cheverly.

During World War II, he served five years in the Army at West Point, holding the rank of master sergeant.

He leaves his wife, Nathalie, and five children, Dennis L., Michael J., Sarah Ellen, Helen and Thomas, all of the home address; a brother, Lawrence G., of Pittsburgh, Pa., and two sisters, Mabel and Edna Morrissey, of 1810 Twenty-third street S.E.

Services will be 9:30 a.m. Tuesday at St. Andrews Church in Cheverly. Burial will be at Arlington Cemetery.